Fire Safety Advisor Refresher (Queensland)

Overview:

Participants who have been appointed as a Fire Safety Advisor are required to complete refresher training every 3 years. As of 1 July 2009, under the Queensland Building Fire Safety Regulation 2008, all high occupancy buildings are legally required to appoint a Fire Safety Advisor. This training provides participants with the skills and knowledge to carry out the duties of the Fire Safety Advisor, such as developing risk management strategies and advising on emergency planning processes.

Completion of this course not only satisfies the training requirements for the 'Fire Safety Advisor' role under the Queensland Building Fire Safety Regulations 2008, but meets the national qualifications in emergency prevention, workplace evacuation and the initial response training required to deal with emergencies in the workplace.
